DHILADELPHIA JACK O'BRIEN'S statement that he wants to fight Jeffries-if Jeffries is willing to leave his cabbage patch-and feels sure that he can whip the boilermaker, has aroused quite a bit of com-ment among the sports. Some take O'Brien seriously and sit down to figure out the fight on the strength of the Kaufmann and Fitzsimmons affairs. Others smile and pass over the argument with a wink. Some think that Jack is wisely plugging his own game, knowing that Jeffries will not take him up, or that he would get a fine wad of yellow-boys out of the fight even if he lost. Others, remembering O'Brien's modesty in the Jeffries connection a few months ago, made good two or three times when the sceptical didn't think it was in

MARTO SHOWS HE'S A REAL GOOD ONE

Local Boy Makes Great Impression by Showing Against Amby McGarry. ·

One of the best, if not the best, boys around New York is Johnny Marto. He is a 126-pounder, and at that weight it is doubtful if he has any superiors.

Marto boxed Amby McGarry Saturday night at the Metropolitan A. C. and gave that husky lad the hardest fight of his career. They went through three ripping rounds, and at the end McGazzy's face was badly out up and he was breathing hard. Marto never drew a long breath.

Only in one round, the last, did Mo-Garry get to Marto effectively. Then he struck his left hand into Marto's face three times in succession.

It's hard to take anything from Me-

Garry because he's so strong and always so willingly aggressive, but if empbody ever earned an advantage over him in three rounds it is Marto. How the latter would fare in a longer bout can only be guessed at. McGarry is essentially a nish fighter, but as a threerounder Marto is one of the few who can take him along at a stiff pace.

McGarry's face looked bad after the bout Saturday night. Both his eyes were swollen and his nose was bleeding. He was, however, badly scarred before the bout began. He showed marks of his previous bouts with Wille Lewis and Johnny Burns. Marto's punches didn't improve Amby's personal appearance, and the several hard cracks on the jaw didn't tend to make him any stronger. Despite all this, McGarry fought hard and in the tast round was stronger than ever.

It was the general opinion among the crowd present that McGarry is entitled to a let up. He has been fighting too much, it seems. Instead of showing improvement with each bout he seems to be slowing up some. A rest might de him good. ways so willingly aggressive, but if any
